SYNOPSIS

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory is a novel by the British author Roald Dahl. Mr. Wonka the owner of the greatest chocolate factory in the world, one day decides to open the doors of his factory to five children. In order to choose who would enter his factory he decides to release five golden tickets in five separate Wonka chocolate bars. The winners would get a tour of the magical and mysterious factory. And what is more, these lucky children would receive a free life – time's supply of chocolates. This story features the adventures of young Charlie Bucket and his Grandpa Joe, as they join the small group of contest winners and experience the most amazing factory ever.
